Update as at 31 Dec 2016

Fund Description

The QuayStreet Conservative Fund invests in a diversified portfolio of predominantly defensive assets such as cash, term deposits and fixed interest securities but will include a smaller allocation to growth assets such as listed property, infrastructure and utility securities and equities. The investment objective is to provide a level of return consistent with the target asset allocation and risk profile of the Fund. Investment returns will vary from year to year and may be negative.

Monthly Update

One of the recent themes markets have been busy digesting is what kind of impact the new US president elect, Donald Trump, will have on the US economy and the rest of the world. Trump's economic policies and stance have in general been interpreted as being moderately reflationary for the US. This has been very supportive for risky assets where most leading indices have made strong gains during the last couple of months. For December the MSCI World (NZD) and the Australian S&P/ASX 200 had a strong month returning 4.1% and 4.4% respectively however the global rally did not seem to have any impact in New Zealand as the S&P/NZX 50 returned -0.2%.

It was another negative month for the local bond market as New Zealand interest rates continued to rise. However the rate of change has certainly slowed following the significant moves in October and November. International bond markets had mixed results with longer term yields showing signs of stabilisation.

The Fund returned 0.3% relative to it's benchmark which returned 0.4%. The top negative contributor to relative performance was the exposure to Australian equities while the top positive contributor was the exposure to fixed interest. There were no significant asset allocation changes made over the month.
